My comment concerns are about redistricting. A republican request to have the Supreme Court define districts for state elections should be denied.

Even the most liberal judge would reject this as legislating by judiciary. Within the checks and balances of our governance, this is unacceptable.

The Supreme Court's role should be to rule on whether districts are fair, when and if it is asked.

The solution to redistricting is to encourage and to accept a bipartisan commission to draw the maps. Wisconsin should join other states in this process.

We can accomplish more together than separate, and we desperately need to be together.
